

INHS Newsletter – June 2018

Dear INHS members,

Welcome to the INHS June newsletter. Firstly, we would like to say a big thank you to those members who attended our third biennial conference at the University of Ontario Institute of Technology, Canada last month. The conference involved 80 speakers from 16 different nations, providing thought-provoking and engaging papers, panel discussions and workshops. A special thank you goes to Prof Barbara Perry for hosting the conference. We would also like to remind conference presenters about the potential of presenting their work via our online blog. Please contact our new blog editors Dr Marian Duggan and Dr Mohamad Al-Hakim for further information on writing for the INHS blog. We will also be launching a new podcast of interviews with INHS members about their research or policy and practice work later this year – so watch this space!

In this newsletter, we include many new additions to the online library, a new blog post by Professor Mark Walters, “The Life Cycle of a Hate Crime: Recommendations for effectively combating hate crime across Europe”, and many interesting events around the world. We would also like to make you aware of a Special Issue on “Discourses of Hate” guest-edited by Professors Barbara Perry and Gail Mason for the International Journal for Crime, Justice and Social Democracy. Finally, we highlight information about the new GDPR rules on the collection and maintenance of your personal data at the end of this newsletter.

GDPR Privacy Notice: How the INHS handles your data

As many of you may be aware, there are new rules governing the way that bodies record and maintain personal data within the EU. The INHS has sought professional advice on this and we have been assured that, based on the form and purpose of the Network and the type of data that is submitted via our homepage, we fulfil the obligations under the new GDPR rules. Nonetheless, in light of the introduction of the GDPR we felt that it was important to provide the following information about the way we collect and handle your personal information.

What information do we collect from you?

The INHS collects and processes the following data about people it keeps on its mailing list:

- Name
- Email address

We only collect the data we need and keep that data up to date.

We have this data about you on our mailing list because you provided it when joining the network via our homepage.

Why do we collect this information?

The INHS collects only the data we need and we keep the data up to date and only for as long as it is needed. We collect your personal data in order to:

- send you information about the latest news, publications and events relating to hate studies

We do not use the data we collect to make decisions about individuals or to analyse information on an individual level.

We take our obligations for data handling very seriously and it is therefore important for you to know that the lawful basis for us processing your information is that consent has been provided by the data subject has given his or her consent for the processing of their personal data for this specific purpose.

What do we do with your information?

We collect the data about you from the online form you completed when you signed up to the Network via our homepage. The data is then kept in an online database (Mailchimp) and used to contact individuals to achieve the purposes listed above.

Who do we share your information with?

Your data will not be shared with any other organisation.

What rights do you have in relation to the way we process your data?

You have the right to ask us to confirm that your personal data is being processed and to access (i.e. have a copy) of that data as well as to be provided with supplemental information about the processing.

Where the data we hold on you is inaccurate, you may request that we rectify these inaccuracies.

You have the right to have your data erased by us.

Each time we send you an INHS newsletter you will have the right to opt out of receiving information and your database record will be amended and you will no longer receive information from us. The links are provided at the end of each email we send to you (see below).
